Phyllis shared the story below with us.

"In April of last year I had my annual physical. My cholesterol was over 200 and I was at the highest weight I had been in my life.

"I went on a trip to the Oregon coast with a good friend of mine. One night we talked about our goals. I said I wanted to get in better shape, especially after talking to my doctor. The one thing was that it was difficult to find the motivation.

"She sat across the table from me and asked, 'What can I do to help?' We made a plan: I started a food journal that I sent to her by email every day (for 60 days). She gave me some tips on eating better, portion control and eating a small meal or snack every 3-4 hours. I made little changes every week. I began exercising consistently 3 days a week and

Dear Linda,

We've taken your feedback and comments from the recent survey we sent to heart. You'll find the same great articles in a format that we hope is easier to read. This month our focus is on Learning, the second core value necessary to build and maintain a Personal Safety Net. Also new this year, we'll periodically include a Soft Skill column, written by Sue Mackey.

Soft Skills

In early 2008 I met Safety Nets authors Judy Pigott and John W. Gibson. We discovered common interests and decided to collaborate to help and support you as you develop a Personal Safety Net and team support for yourself or for someone else.

This column will cover the soft skills, by which we mean the communication skills, social graces and chosen habits you will need and use to successfully create and maintain your networks. Personal Safety Nets gives a complete guide on what to do and how to prepare. My column will support you in taking action. There's a lot to learn.

Phyllis used honesty with herself and her friend, which allowed her to accept help in developing self-discipline and prioritizing skills which led to her success. Without honesty first, she would have failed to develop the necessary soft skills required for success.

A few of the soft skills that Phyllis used in the Feature Article are listed below:

- Good problem solving and decision making
- Self-discipline
- Prioritization
- Organization
- Honesty and integrity

These are often more complex than we think and I will share more about the soft skills in upcoming months.

Sue Mackey, of The Mackey Group, author of Living Well Working Smart: Soft Skills for Success, Women Navigating Adversity: The Courage They Didn't Know They Had, and Kids

30 days later I had lost 9 lbs. Six months later I was 35 lbs lighter and I felt really good.

"For the last year I have been walking around some 25+ pounds lighter, my cholesterol is down to 154, and I can tell you I feel much better!"

"So I am sitting here across the table from you, asking...What can I do to help?"

"I will be right here with you on the journey ...walking the walk. I wish you all good success!"

Phyllis has shown the strength of a Personal Safety Net by enlisting the help of others, then offering to extend help to them too.

Steps to Creating a Strong Safety Net

1. Define what's going on - tell safe people & keep the information flowing
2. Ask for help - remember, we all need to give, so give others a chance to do so. Practice, practice, practice.
3. Be specific in your requests - it's easier for folks to help if they know what you need/want & can accept
4. Get organized - so all the "casseroles" don't come on Tuesdays
5. Don't take "no" personally - Really, it's more about the availability or limitations of others than about you!
6. Keep on giving to others - especially if you want to feel better, there's nothing like helping someone else.
